"What Denomination Do We Represent?"

Daily we receive letters asking, “Who are you? What denomination do you represent?” No one seems able to guess. And no wonder.

For we are not denominational! The “WORLD TOMORROW” radio and television programs and The Plain Truth magazine are NON-sectarian (I Cor. 1:12-13).

What denomination did Jesus join? Few ever stopped to think of it in that way. The religious sects of His day were the Pharisees, the Sadducees, the Essenes, the Samaritans, etc. Jesus joined none of them. On the contrary. He called His disciples out of them—out of all organizations of men. The Greek word “ecclesia” translated “Church” in English has the meaning of “called-out ones.”

The Eternal God called me from the field of business to a life of separation for the mission being carried out in His work. Consequently, in complete surrender to Him, without preconceived notions, doctrines, and convictions, and with the guidance of His Spirit, I prayerfully approached the study of the Bible as a business man would approach a business problem. God started this work through us as small as a work could start, and on and on with nothing but FAITH.

We are utterly independent of denominations, sects, or organizations of any kind—wholly DE-pendent upon our heavenly Father for guidance, for funds—for EVERYTHING.

I speak and write, not in the name of any denomination, but solely in the name of Jesus Christ!

Herbert W. Armstrong
The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong

This is the second installment of the unusual story of Mr. Armstrong's life—how he was led into the ministry, and how he found the one TRUE Church.

by Herbert W. Armstrong

Late in 1926 I was rudely challenged. My wife had taken up with "religious fanaticism"—that is—it seemed like fanaticism to me, because it was a teaching and way of life contrary to that of the established churches.

I was angered into the most determined study of my life—a night-and-day study to prove, by the Bible, that "all these churches can't be wrong." Soon I was disillusioned—dumbfounded—shaken. I made the astonishing and disheartening discovery that the teachings of Sunday School days were at variance with the plain "Thus saith the LORD!"

I studied evolution—compared it to the creation account in Genesis. I began to question the existence of God.

But, persisting in relentless study, I found scientific and rational proof that God is, and that the Bible is His inspired, infallible and authoritative message to mankind. That gave me a solid foundation.

Only ONE True Church

But where was the ONE true Church? Jesus Christ said: "I will build my Church." He did build it. He came to earth to start the work of God. He commissioned His Church to carry it on—to preach His very same GOSPEL to the world. The churches of organized "Christianity" were not preaching that Gospel—but a gospel of men about the person of Christ.

Somewhere, there had to exist today the real Body of Christ—that collective body of humans through whom, by the power of His Holy Spirit, God was carrying on the same work He began through the individual body of Jesus Christ.

I was to be years finding it. But the real story of this search began much earlier. My whole life had been merely the background for it.

So, in the September number, I began the story of an eventful and jam-packed life from the beginning, from earliest memory, between ages 2 and 5—of my great-grandfather, age 94; of the incident that caused me to swear off chewing tobacco at age 5; of my first (and only) spanking in school at age 6; my first "girl friend," same age; of the "pigeon milk hunt" at age 8; and also at age 8 of the ordeal of boredom waiting up in church until midnight in the "watch-night" service watching the old CENTURY out and the new century in; of learning to swim; running to see a "horseless carriage"—which turned out to be mule-drawn; experiences in baseball, football, track, etc.; learning to smoke in a secret cave; becoming a wrestler at age 11, early religious training of Quaker stock; and my first job away from home at age 16.

Ambition and Self-Confidence Aroused

On this job, my employer complimented my work, and professed to see abilities in me that could lead to large success—if I diligently applied myself in study, preparation and work. Somehow he inoculated me with self-confidence, set aflame energetic ambition. This was all vanity, and it led to an overdose of cocky conceit. But it did arouse strong will, and it impelled to enthusiastic driving effort.

I began burning the midnight oil. I frequented the Philosophy, Biography, and Business Administration departments of the public library in Des Moines, Iowa, where I was born and reared.

But as yet there had been no definite goal in life set. At the tender age of 16 the idea of fixing a definite objective—of finding the true PURPOSE of life—occurs to few minds. Ambition had been aroused. I was burning with desire to go somewhere in life—to become a success. But exactly where that "somewhere" was, or precisely what constituted the "success" I was to achieve, had not as yet crystallized.

Just how the urge took hold of me I do not now remember, but the next summer, having finished two years of high school, I was imbued with the idea of becoming a school teacher.

The Teaching Career Blow-up

A little investigation revealed that a Teacher's Certificate could be obtained by passing a County Teachers' Examination. I was able to obtain copies of exam questions of past years. Thus familiarized with the nature and trend of the questions, I spent the first weeks of summer vacation "boning up." There were a couple subjects I would be required to teach which I had never taken. One of these was physiology. Procuring text books, I drove myself thru a rapid self-taught course of study on these subjects, beside a refresher course of all other subjects.

The Teachers' Examination was passed, with the usual grade high in the nineties.

Next, I obtained permission from my parents to visit one of my cousins who lived on a farm down in Warren County, south of Des Moines. That provided opportunity to search for a school teaching job. I learned of a certain country school where the teacher had not yet been hired for the coming fall, and quickly arranged thru the Chairman for a meeting with the school board, all farmers.
At this meeting I seemed to qualify in their eyes in every way but one. They were very skeptical about the ability of a 17-year-old to maintain discipline over 18 and 19-year-old boys probably taller and much huskier than I.

But by this time I had become exceedingly self-confident and cocky. There was a ready answer to that, or any other objections.

"I intend to introduce an athletic program," I said. "At North High, in Des Moines, I have had training in football, basketball, track, tennis, under the best coaches. Out on the playgrounds I'll be one of these boys, coaching them in sports they have never played. I know how to get along with fellows of my own age. They will like me, and there won't be any disciplinary problems. Besides, if one of them does get smart, I began to learn wrestling at 11 years of age, and I'll have a hammer-lock or some other wrestling hold on the fellow before he knows what happened to him, and he'll yell out quick submission. I can throw a fellow twice my size."

The school board seemed tremendously impressed with this show of self-assurance. They hired me.

Came fall, and the day I was to take the train from Des Moines for the school teaching job. I shall never forget that morning. Up bright and early, I packed a suit-case, and started down the stairs.

But squarely in the middle of the stairs at the bottom, blocking passage, was a 210-pound man I didn't dare try to throw with any wrestling holds!

"Just where do you think you're going, young man?" came the sharp, stern, and very commanding deep bass voice of my father.

I told him then about my school teaching job. I think I had been afraid to mention any of this to my parents before.

"You march right back up stairs, and unpack that suit-case," ordered that authoritative bass voice, "and don't let me hear any more of this tom-foolery about dropping out of high school to become a teacher at your young age. You're going back to high school this fall."

And thus the school teaching career was atom-bombed 36 years before Hiroshima and Nagasaki got the treatment. But it was not long until a concrete life-goal was formed.

At age 18, I encountered a book in the library, titled "Choosing a Vocation." It took the reader thru a self-analysis, together with a survey of various vocations, occupations and professions, to place the candidate where he best fit. It turned out that I would probably be most successful in the advertising profession. This, to me, was one of the truly exciting, thrilling professions.

It happened that an uncle in Des Moines was the most prominent advertising man in the state. The place to begin, in the advertising profession, he advised, was the want-ad section of a daily newspaper. This was the freshman class of the advertising school. He assigned me to one year in the want-ads. He advised that I get a job on the Des Moines Daily Capital, published by Lafe Young, Senior United States Senator from Iowa.

I did not ask The Capital if they needed any help. That was too negative—might have resulted in being turned down. I went straight to the manager of the want-ad department, told him I was entering the advertising profession, and had decided to join his staff because it offered the best opportunity to learn, and to advance. I got the job. The starting salary was $6 per week.

I had no conception, then, that the advertising profession was not, after all, to be my final life profession—or that this experience was merely the preliminary training needed for the ultimate bigger job in God's ministry. But I think God knew, and planned it that way!

In those days I had developed a very excessive case of swelled-head. I was snappy, confident, conceited—yet sincere, and intending to be completely honest.

On this want-ad job I soon became known as a "hustler." On the street I hurried—walked rapidly. I was a dynamo of energy. Of nights I studied. Books were procured on advertising, on psychology, merchandising, business management, and English. All the leading trade papers were subscribed to and diligently read—primarily "Printers Ink," and "Advertising & Selling," the two leading trade papers of the profession.

My uncle directed the training in learning an effective style in writing. Constantly I studied the writing style of a man named Hopkins, chief copy writer for the Lord & Thomas Advertising agency. This man reputedly drew a salary of $50,000 a year, writing all the ads for Quaker Oats, Pepsodent, Palmolive, Blue Jay Corn Plasters, Ovaltine, and others. His rapid style, unique, yet plain, simple and easy-to-read ads built million-dollar businesses for those firms.

Also my uncle started me reading Elbert Hubbard, with his two magazines, The Philistine and The Era—primarily for ideas, writing style, vocabulary—altho he cautioned me against Hubbard's religious philosophies. Later I was to become well acquainted with Elbert Hubbard.

The "Goat Work"

The first day in want-ads I was started out, bright and early, on a job they called "the Goat Work," with a young man now ready to graduate from that job.

This job in the newspaper business might be compared to "boot camp" in the Marines. It is a most undesirable, tough, breaking-in job. I soon learned what it was.

We each armed ourselves with a copy of the previous night's paper, a want-ad blank, and a pencil. Then we started out afoot. We headed up the hill on West Fourth and Fifth Streets—the rooming house district.

"I'll stop in at a couple of rooming houses," said my predecessor-instructor, "just to show you how to do it; then I'll go back to the office, and you're on your own."

Stepping boldly up to the first rooming-house door, he rang the bell. The landlady opened the door, instantly recognizing the folded newspaper in his side pocket and the want-ad blank in his hand.

"NO!" she snapped decisively, before he could say a word, "I don't want to run any want-ads."

"But lady," my instructor put a foot in the door being slammed in his face, "you know Mrs. Jones down in the next block, don't you?"

"Never heard of her!" Of course not. Neither had the boy with me.

"Well, Mrs. Jones put her ad in the Capital, and at least a dozen men came trying to rent the room. The reason you didn't get results is that you put your ad in the wrong paper."

But by this time the madam had managed to dis lodge his foot and slam the door.

This same procedure was repeated at the next house.

"Well—" said my want ad buddy, happily, "that shows you how to do it. Hope you sell a lot of ads. So long—see you at the office."

Finding a More Effective Way

But it didn't seem that he had demonstrated how to do it—but rather, how not to do it.

I waited until he was out of sight. I hid both the newspaper and the want-ad blank in my inner pocket, covered with my overcoat. Then I walked briskly up to the next rooming-house door.

"I hope you haven't rented your room yet," I smiled as the landlady opened the door. "May I see it?"

"Why, certainly," she smiled back, opening wide the door.

I trailed her to the second-floor room. No doors were going to be slammed in my face.

"Why," I smiled, "this is a delightful room, isn't it?" The landlady beamed expectantly. I whipped out the want-ad blank and began rapidly writing.

"Here!" she exclaimed suspiciously, "what are you doing with that want-ad blank?"

But she could not slam the front door in my face now—not did she appear big enough to attempt throwing me out bodily.

"Now look," I said calmly, "This is a lovely room. Do you know why your want-ads have not rented it for you? The want-ad solicitors have told you it was because you put it in the wrong paper. You know that's bosh as well as I. The reason you didn't rent your room is that you are not a professional advertising-writer!"

By this time I had the want-ad written—at least two or three times longer (and costlier) than the average.

"Listen," I continued, "imagine you are a young man reading all the room-for-rent ads, looking for a room that is going to be your home. Now think how all those other ads are written—then listen to this, and think!—which room would you go to see, and rent?"

I read the ad, which certainly made the room sound very desirable. In fact, its glowing terms probably flattered her. She just couldn't resist seeing that flowery description of her room in print in the paper.

"Why, I'd certainly want to rent that room, instead of those ordinarily described in the want-ads," she replied. "That doesn't make it sound good." She bought the ad—as large as three ordinary ads.

And the ad did rent her room!

That was the first advertisement I ever wrote that was printed. But I had already been diligently studying text books on advertising writing. God begins whatever He does thru human instruments in the smallest manner—and a want-ad is the smallest of ads.

Today, we purchase full page advertising space and, with advertising technique, publish the non-commercial GOSPEL message. This procedure, as this is written, involves one leading sectional farm paper. But it is anticipated, God willing, that soon full page and double-page messages will be published in many farm papers and other magazines, and in Reader's Digest in many languages in many nations all over the world. This is becoming a most important door which the Eternal God is opening for the preaching (Mat. 24:14) and publishing (Mark 13:10) of the true Gospel of the Kingdom of God into all the world for a witness unto all nations.

And thus the twenty years of experience in the advertising profession, starting with this want-ad, was preparation for a mighty work.

After an energetic morning I was back at the want-ad office about 1 P.M., the dead-line for getting ads to the composing room. I had a large handful of ads.

"Much-a-Welcome"

Soon I thought of a faster, more pleasant way to sell more room-for-rent ads.

The rival papers were The Register & Leader, and The Daily News. The News didn't count as a want-ad medium, but the "R & L," as we then called it was the city's big want-ad medium. Today The Des Moines Register is recognized by many as one of the nation's ten great newspapers. In 1924 I was offered the job of advertising manager of The Register, and refused it—but that's getting ahead of the story.

The "R. & L." printed perhaps three or four times more room-for-rent ads than The Capital. Rooming-house landladies had become smart. In order to prevent newspaper solicitors annoying them on the telephone, or prospective roomers turning them down on the phone before actually seeing the rooms, they usually gave the street address, only, in their ads.

I knew that the "information" office of the telephone company indexed according to street addresses, as well as by name, but the information operators were not supposed to give out names or numbers for a given street address.

So I called the information office, and first engaged the operator in a jocular conversation. After a while I persuaded her, this once, to give me the name of the rooming-house landlady at a certain street address.

"Well much-a-welcome," I said jokingly.

"Oh, you're entirely welcome," she said.

"No!" I came back, "I'm not welcome—I said you're much-a-welcome."

She was a little confused at this 18-year-old kidding.

"Well, what am I supposed to say, then?"

"Why, you're supposed to answer, you're entirely obliged!"

She had a good laugh. That joke sounds about as "corny" as Iowa's tall corn, now—but it certainly got me the names and telephone numbers of every room-for-rent want-ad in the morning paper that we had not carried the evening before.

Always I ended by saying "Much-a-welcome," and she would laughingly reply, "Oh, you're entirely obliged." Silly, perhaps—but it got me the names. and telephone numbers I wanted. Quite a telephonic friendship was struck up with this information operator. Often I wondered how old she was — what she looked like. I never knew. It did not seem appropriate to suggest a face-to-face meeting. But this daily morning procedure continued until I was promoted to the Real Estate department.

Getting Ads by Phone

Once I had the names and telephone numbers, they were called by phone.

"Good morning, Is this Mrs. Smith," I would start off, cheerily.

While I was only a boy of 18, and appeared rather immature when calling on these prospects face to face, I had inherited a strong bass-baritone voice from my father, even lower-pitched than now, and appeared quite mature on the telephone. I discovered, even then, 47 years ago, that I was possibly more effective audibly than visually. Indeed, this was the first prelude training for radio preaching that was to follow, beginning 24 years later.

"I wonder," I would continue the telephone conversation, "if you would describe your room to me." While getting the description, prompted by repeated questions from me, I was rapidly writing a very descriptive want-ad. Then I explained that she had not described it well enough in the morning-paper ad to cause anyone to really want to walk out to see it, and told her that I was an expert ad-writer, and quickly read the ad that would tell enough about the room to cause prospective roomers to want to see it. I explained that the reason she had not been getting results was the fact her ad was written so inexpertly.

A large majority of these hastily-written telephone ads were sold. The rooms were usually rented — unless they failed to live up to the description after prospective roomers called to see them.

Soon we were carrying more room-for-rent ads than the "R. & L." Whenever one of our rooming-house customers had a vacant room, they automatically called for me on the telephone, and soon rented the room again.

My First Display Ads

It was not long until I was promoted out of the room-for-rent columns, and into the Real Estate section.

But first came a challenging test — the toughest of all. The Want-Ad manager, a young man (older than I) named Charles Tobin, had an ambition. He hoped to increase his salary to a point that would enable him to wear a freshly laundered shirt every day. Immediately, that became one of my ambitions, too. The assignment he gave me was to sell a special section on the want-ad page, of single-column display ads to the second-hand furniture dealers.

These stores were all owned by a type of men who did not believe in advertising, and valued every penny as if it were a million dollars. To me, this was an unpleasant task, because so many of these stores were dirty and dusty and musty, cluttered and ill-arranged — an unpleasant atmosphere to enter.

Here, again, however, ads were sold by writing the ads, and making attractive-appearing lay-outs. These were the very first display ads I ever had printed. I remember staying up until midnight to encourage him to begin to believe that he could be a success some day, and to start working, and to begin to believe that he could be a success some day, and to start working, and to begin to believe that he could be a success some day, and to begin working, and fighting, even against sluggish impulses of self, to make something of himself. For some months I continued occasionally to drop in at this store to give him some influence over his back-ward boy. It seemed like a responsibility that had come to me, to encourage him to go back to school, to study hard, and to begin to believe that he could be a success some day, and to start working, and fighting, even against sluggish impulses of self, to make something of himself.

During this "special number" crusade, I encountered a somewhat handicapped Jewish boy of about my age, the son of one of these "used furniture" merchants. The store owner was delighted to learn that I had some influence over his backward boy. It seemed like a responsibility that had come to me, to encourage him to go back to school, to study hard, and to begin to believe that he could be a success some day, and to start working, and fighting, even against sluggish impulses of self, to make something of himself. Inside South America

Prophecy reveals that our neighbors to the south are about to play a significant part in world events. Benjamin Rea, head of the Spanish department in Ambassador College, accompanied Ted Armstrong on an urgent fact-finding tour through South America. Here is the second installment of Mr. Rea's diary.

by Benjamin L. Rea

The World Tomorrow program is soon to be broadcast in the Spanish language to South America. So that we might know what the people "south of the border" are thinking, Mr. Rea interviewed personally dozens of people in Panama, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru. The previous installment found Mr. Rea in Santiago, Chile, where we now pick up the story.

June 27

At 7:00 P.M. I left Santiago, Chile, on a Swiss train owned by the Chilean government bound for Valdivia—the capital of the southern most state of Chile. It is about 890 kilometers (553 miles) south of the national capital.

I had to buy a Pullman-class ticket in order to have a decent trip. Pullman-class in Chile is comparable to the first class or tourist class in the United States. In this country, below the Pullman-class, you have the first, second and third classes. First class in Chile is bad—there is no heat in the cars and they are dirty. Second class is terrible! And in third class the passengers ride with the chickens and turkeys! (Why turkeys? According to the religious customs or beliefs in Chile, June is the turkey month here. Anyone who has a birthday in this month is given a turkey for his birthday feast.)

The train started and before we left the switching yards the train was doing at least 50 mph, heading south.

At this point, I would like to tell you something about the geography of Chile.

The Shoestring Republic

The country is often referred to as the shoestring republic. It is a very narrow, mountainous land, having one-third of its area covered by the towering ranges of the Andes.

To the north is the mineral rich Atacama Desert, one of the driest areas in the Western Hemisphere. In the center, the country looks a great deal like Southern California, having the same type climate year round. As you proceed south, the countryside becomes greener and in the extreme south the topography looks a good deal like the western sides of Washington and Oregon.

The center of Chile is a 700 mile long valley called the Central Valley. It is thickly populated and is the most productive area in the whole nation. I could see both sides of Chile from the train windows, because in some places the country is only 40 to 50 miles wide and one could see the mountain ranges on both sides of the train.

The first impressions of the country-side, however, were far from being attractive.

The villages that we were passing through were dirty, houses unkempt, children naked, fields uncared for, fences broken down. I counted five working tractors on the entire trip from Santiago to Valdivia—a distance of 890 kilometers (553 miles).

I arrived at 9:00 P.M. and the weather was very, very cold and foggy. Through the dense fog, you could see nothing but dim, blinking lights. I didn't have any hotel reservations, and I was praying fervently that I would be able to find a hotel room. I could imagine myself sleeping out on a park bench on a night that was cold, damp, and foggy, and at a place 8,500 miles from home. I was blessed—there was a room available in the Hotel Pedro de Valdivia in the center of town.

After checking in, I looked out the window of my room. I couldn't see a thing. Outside was a white wall of fog completely shutting in the hotel. This produced an eerie far away feeling. And truly, I was far away—in the last corner of the world!

What It's Like "Down Under"

June 28

In the morning the fog lifted and I could see a very beautiful countryside with green trees everywhere. The trees of the hinterland of Valdivia are coniferous and of course are evergreens. There is the very beautiful Valdivia river running through the center of the city.

I was able to walk over the town and take some pictures. While walking, I ran into many children running around the cold icy streets barefooted and ill-clad. It was so cold that the ground was iced over; and in some places where there was a great deal of dampness, the ice had formed little icicles on the ground. Icicles were hanging off the eaves of the houses, too.

This is the heart of the German speaking country in Chile. You find that stores have signs written in both Spanish and German. The newspapers and magazines are predominantly German. In the bookstores, the books also are German with some few books in Spanish. Most of the population is bi-lingual.

As Friday ended, and the Sabbath came, the weather became colder, colder, colder. There was no heat in the hotel room. The fog came as the sun went down. The city again became entombed in a blanket of white.

June 29, Sabbath

Sabbath morning, I was awakened by sounds outside the hotel. I looked out the window and the ever present blanket of fog had me "trapped" inside the building. I couldn't see a thing three or four feet away from the window. But I could hear sounds—eerie sounds, lonesome sounds—coming from the fog.

One of the most striking sounds was the voices of the news vendors walking through the town crying out the name of the local newspaper. As they shouted, Although this power plant at Buenos Aires, Argentina was built and owned by the Belgians and French, the government nationalized it. This action is typical of a socialist state.

"Correo" in a plaintive voice, it sounded like little sheep going to the slaughter. Newsvenders in this city were all children of about 10 or 11 years of age. This in itself would cause no comment, but the fact is that the weather was very cold and most of these children were barefoot and had very few clothes on their ill-fed bodies.

I began work on the Ambassador College Bible Correspondence Course and worked all day on it.

An Englishman Comes to the Rescue

On Monday, July 1, I made reservations to return to Santiago. I went to all the banks in town trying to cash some American Railway Express Checks. The hotel would not take them, the banks would not take them, the stores would not take them—I tried virtually every place. There was no American Consulate in Valdivia to vouch for the security of the checks, and I didn’t have enough Chilean pesos to pay my hotel bill and the return fare back to Santiago.

Returning to the hotel with the checks, I happened to remember a British Consulate that I had seen on one of my walks through town. I walked over to the Consulate and asked the information clerk for the Consul. I was ushered into an office and met a Mr. Campbell, the Vice Consul in Valdivia. Mr. Campbell told me that he would be glad to help me if he could. He happened to know a friend who needed some American money. He arranged for this man to come over to meet me. I needed $40 worth of Chilean pesos in order to buy the ticket and pay my hotel bill. This man needed the exact amount I needed—$40 in American money to pay a bill on some goods that were coming from the United States!

After cashing my checks, I thanked the Vice Consul for having helped me and I thanked God for having sent his friend to me. I knew he was God-sent. Else how could I have found anyone else in a strange city who needed the same amount of American money that I needed in foreign money?

I boarded the train. It was first class down to Antihhue, about 40 miles distant, and there I had to change to the Pullman coach that would take me into Santiago. There was no heat in the train and for 40 miles I shivered from cold.

While waiting for the train to switch in Antihhue, I saw two little Chilean boys standing outside. One of them was barefoot and was trying to sell a few flowers that he had picked on the roadside. He was so cold that his flesh was quivering. He would try to warm his hands by wrapping them in the very thin sweater that he was wearing. I remarked to a well dressed Chilean that this poor boy was standing outside the train without shoes in the cold. He turned to me and in Spanish said, "Aw, just some little puppy." He had absolutely no compassion for him. This unmerciful characteristic is quite apparent throughout Latin America and much of the world. These people are immune to the poverty around them, and the misery has absolutely no effect on them.

American Independence Day in Chile

July 4

This is the American Independence Day. The conservative papers here in Chile laud the United States in the things that we have done for the rest of the hemisphere. But the papers that are read by the majority of the people—the ones that mold public opinion—the tabloids—did not have such kind words to say about the United States and the American policy of developing the backward countries of the world.

A flotilla of the United States Navy anchored on July 4 at the harbor at Valparaiso. Immediately, the value of the peso went up as the sailors entered the capital. They were assailed by girls, boys and men who wanted to render them a service—all for a fee. I suppose there were some who sincerely wanted to be friendly to these sailors.

In the lounge of the hotel that night... a man started a conversation with me and carried it on for some time. I would like to repeat certain portions of the conversation to you now. I couldn't take notes while talking to him, but this is what he said in general terms. He used a disrespectful term—poking fun at the American sailors when he said that they were "invading the country."

I replied, "Yes, but look at all the dollars they are bringing in."

He said, "Sure, sure, I know we need the dollars, but these Americans are so simple—they get into every type of trouble, they rape our women, they create havoc here and there, they disrupt the transportation system, they clog the markets, they make the prices go high. The Americans are so wise in certain things and so stupid in others." He continued, "It wouldn't surprise me if there isn't trouble—there seems to be unrest all over the city."

I report this conversation, not to give you what one man said, but to give you a little insight into the way many of these people feel about us, and things American.

On another occasion, I started a conversation with a waiter. I mentioned that there was a great deal of unrest in the air, and that it seemed as if Chile were going to have a revolution. He put his finger to his lips and told me that it was very dangerous to say such words openly at that time, because a man had talked about the government that very morning and was taken out of the lounge into custody and was shot just outside the hotel. I looked all over the papers to see if I could find an account of this—I didn't find anything. Of course in Chile, the censorship is iron-clad, when it needs to be.

I had dinner at the Escorial, a restaurant of repute, that night and later went over to a German restaurant called the Bierhall. There were many, many Germans there. I talked to one young man, about twenty-five years old, who had been trained as a Nazi during his youth. He said that there was a great deal of German activity still going on in and around Santiago, and especially farther south. He told me that most of the local Germans had remained loyal to Germany during the last war and that there was still a lot of pro-Nazi activity in Chile.

I asked him if he thought Hitler were still alive. He told me, "Personally, no, but I have heard that he is still alive and is around San Carlos Bariloche in Argentina."

Ted Armstrong Arrives
July 8

Mr. Ted Armstrong arrived today in Santiago. It had been a month, lacking three days, since I had left Pasadena, and I was anxiously awaiting his arrival at the airport. I was very happy to see him when he stepped out of the plane and started to walk across the airfield toward the station.

On the 9th of July, we went to a small radio station called La Reina, a 5,000 watt station, located in the heart of downtown Santiago. We talked to one of the announcers, to the disc-jockeys, and to the manager of the station. We explained to them the purpose of our program, and they seemed to be quite receptive to the idea of having The World Tomorrow program in the capital of Chile.

That same afternoon Mr. Armstrong and I went out to the Headquarters of the First Tacna Division of the Chilean Army to interview the commander of this regiment. His name was Santiago Nuñoz Polanco. At the gate we were stopped by a guard in a Wehrmacht uniform of the German Third Reich type. The sergeant took our message to Commander Nuñoz and told us that we would have to wait a few minutes before seeing him. Something came up during the interval while we were waiting, and the Commander could not see us, but we were told to come back the next day, that an appointment would be made. Our time schedule did not permit us to do this.

Trying to make the best of the situation, we talked to a few of the soldiers there. I commented to the sergeant who had taken our message to the Commander, that his uniform was almost an exact duplicate of the Wehrmacht uniform worn by the German soldier during the last war. Upon hearing this, he drew up and stood almost at attention and said very proudly, "Yes, our uniforms and our training methods are all German. They are copied after the German system."

I asked him if the commands in the army were given in Spanish. He said that most of the commands were given in Spanish, some in German, and a few in English. After seeing his pride in the German uniform and in the German system, and also the very ferocious nationalism that this man displayed, I commented to him, "Then why aren't the trucks and the rifles that the soldiers have with them of German origin also."

I pointed out that the trucks were American with American markings and that the rifles were of the type used by the American Army and Marine Corps. In fact, all of the equipment I saw on this post was American. Apparently, I touched a sore spot with the sergeant—he did not make any comment.

An Interview Reveals Mr. Messerschmidt

July 10

Mr. Armstrong and I took a taxi over to Valparaiso, some 165 kilometers (102 miles) to the west of Santiago. This cost us $3.00 each way!

On the way over we were fortunate enough to interview, Mr. Niemann, a salesman who traveled all over the Republic of Chile. He knew men from all walks of life, in all the principal cities. He sold hardware equipment and other building items. He told us of meeting a young man in the city of Concepcion in southern Chile called Erhardt Messerschmidt. Mr. Messerschmidt is the nephew of Willy Messerschmidt, the manufacturer of airplanes and automotive equipment in Germany. The Mr. Messerschmidt that lives in Chile operates a fleet of fishing vessels that ply up and down the West Coast of South America as far north as the Panama Canal. Mr. Niemann, the salesman, pointed out that when Mr. Messerschmidt is provoked into it, he becomes very rabidly Nazi. He walks down the streets of Concepcion, Chile, giving the Nazi salute, and is very, very ardently pro-German.

Upon arriving in Valparaiso, I was surprised to find that this was not the industrial area that I had expected. I had seen Chilean newsreels lauding the great industrial enterprises of Valparaiso. The papers also gave many, many accounts of the industrial enterprises that were supposedly located in this city. Mr. Armstrong and I looked several hours and didn't see a single plant.

Although Valparaiso is one of the great seaports of western South America, its commerce did not measure up to its maritime activities. Anchored in the beautiful bay, were several American warships of the flotilla that I mentioned before that had landed in Chile on the 4th of July. The view was magnificent.

We talked to several of the people who lived in this city and found that some American servicemen had committed robbery and many others had generally broken the laws since their arrival in the city. This is unfortunate. The American propaganda there has done nothing to offset the bad reputation that we have earned for ourselves in all the foreign countries. These acts of bad behavior add to our poor reputation.

I had made reservations to leave Santiago on the afternoon of July 11, but the plane was delayed in another city with engine trouble. At noon we received a call from the airline's office saying that the plane would be delayed indefinitely and that we should check in with them around 10 P.M. After doing this, we went out to the airfield and had to wait until 3:30 A.M., when we were processed. Although the airfield at Santiago serves the capital of this South American republic, it was nothing more than a tin barn. There were doors, but they were continually being opened as the passengers went to board the planes taking off for Argentina and other points. Four heaters burning kerosene in the four corners of the building gave off about as much heat as a light bulb. We literally had to sit on these in order to warm ourselves—one side at a time! It was one of the most miserable three or four hours that I have ever spent.

At 5:00 A.M. the plane arrived, and we were ordered aboard at 5:30. I fell asleep and awakened an hour or so later in order to be served breakfast by the hostess aboard the plane. The airlines in this area use the English-Argentine people as employees. These young men and women are descendents of English settlers who settled in the Argentine years ago and who have maintained the English speech with the typical English accent. They also speak a delightful Spanish.

The NUMBER of the "BEAST" . . . 666—Whose number is it?

by Herbert W. Armstrong

Where shall we find that mysterious number 666? Does the pope, as some claim, wear it on his crown, identifying him as the BEAST of Revelation 13? Or must we look for it elsewhere?

Here are all the Scriptures speaking directly of this number:

"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred three score and six" (Rev. 13:17-18).

"And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God" (Rev. 15:2).

Note These Points

From these Scriptures, we have the following definite points:

1. The beast has a NUMBER, and may be identified, if we have wisdom, by this number.
2. The number is 666.
3. We are told to COUNT this number—that is, add it up. The same Greek word is used elsewhere only in Luke 14:28: "COUNT the cost."
4. This number, 666, is the number of the BEAST. The only Bible interpretation of this symbol, "beast," is a kingdom or the king who rules it, and therefore, really is the kingdom (Dan. 7:17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 27). Therefore 666 must be the number of the KINGDOM, or GOVERNMENT, or EMPIRE, as well as that of the king who founds or rules it.
5. The expression "the name of the beast, or the number of his name" makes plain that the number 666 is the number of the NAME OF THE KINGDOM or EMPIRE.
6. The expression "it is the number of a man" shows we must also count this number in the name of the king, or ruler, over the kingdom identified as the "BEAST."

The Beast Is Not the Woman

In the 17th chapter of Revelation we find a "beast," and a "woman"—a great, wealthy woman called "a whore"—who was riding the beast.

The Bible describes the symbol "woman" to mean a CHURCH. See II Cor. 11:2; Rev. 19:7; Eph. 5:23-27. On the other hand, "beast" is a symbol of a KINGDOM, or EMPIRE. The "woman" of the 17th chapter is described beyond possibility of doubt as the Church which did reign over the kingdoms of the Holy Roman Empire.

Let us be consistent. The "BEAST" of Revelation 13 is not the WOMAN who rode the beast—the beast is the GOVERNMENT, and the woman is the CHURCH.

The "beast" of Revelation 13 had 7 heads and 10 horns. It was like a leopard with the feet of a bear, the mouth of a lion. This does not describe the Church, but the Roman GOVERNMENT, or EMPIRE.

In the 7th chapter of Daniel we find the unmistakable identification. The lion symbolized the Chaldean Empire. The bear is the Persian Empire, the leopard was the Greek-Macedonian Empire with its four divisions, pictured by the four heads, and the other beast, mightier and stronger than all, was the ROMAN EMPIRE. And by the time events of history progressed to Rome, we had the seven heads and ten horns.

The "beast" of Rev. 13 had all 7 of the heads and ten horns. It included the strongest aspects of the preceding kingdoms. And so the beast of Revelation 13 is positively identified as the ROMAN EMPIRE.

This "beast" had a DEADLY wound (Rev. 13:3). That means the "beast" DIED—it ceased altogether to exist or function. Yet its deadly wound was later healed, after which (verse 5), it continued to exist another 1260 years!

Those who believe the Catholic Church is the "beast" say this deadly wound came in 1798, when the pope was forced into exile. But the pope was not killed. The Catholic Church did not die, nor for one day did it cease to function. The popes continued to live in VOLUNTARY exile, as a protest against the Italian government until the agreement with Mussolini. But that could in no sense be called a wound TO DEATH. And those who teach this do not expect the Catholic Church to continue on another 1260 years.

But in 476 A.D., the Roman Empire which is the "BEAST," was wounded unto DEATH. The Roman Empire DIED. It ceased altogether to exist. The next three kingdoms to rule in Rome's place—the Heruli, the Vandals, and the Ostrogoths—were barbarian, not Roman kingdoms.

But in 554 Justinian, a true Roman, Emperor of the east, re-established the Roman Empire at Rome. History calls this the "IMPERIAL RESTORATION" of the Roman Empire. The deadly wound was healed. And it continued exactly 1260 years—to 1814, when Napoleon was defeated. "So closed," states West's Modern History, "an Empire that had existed from Augustus Caesar." But this time the Empire did not altogether die. The germ of it remained in 12 little Italian states, united around 1870 by Garibaldi into the present nation of Italy. The EMPIRE went into "the bottomless pit"—a virtual non-existence, from which now it is once more emerging (Rev. 17:8).

The Founder of Rome

The founder, and first king of Rome was ROMULUS. The Roman Empire was named after him His name, the name of a MAN, also is the name of the KINGDOM. And every citizen in the kingdom bears the same name—a ROMAN.
When John wrote this Revelation, telling us to COUNT the number of the Beast, he wrote in the greek language. The Old Testament is written in the language of God's chosen people—the Hebrew. Consequently, we should look for this name, and the number 666, in these languages recognized in the Bible, not in the Latin.

We are all familiar with the Roman numerals, where letters are used for numbers. All understand that I is 1, V is 5, X is 10, etc. But many do not know that both the Hebrew and the Greek languages also use letters for numbers.

In the Hebrew, the name of Romulus is ROMIITH. And, counting the numerical value of these letters in the Hebrew, we have exactly 666!

In the Greek, the language in which Revelation was written, this name is "LATEINOS." It signifies "Latin Man" or "the name of Latium" from which city the Romans derived their origin and their language. This word, too, signifies "ROMAN." In the Greek, L is 30, A is 1, T is 500, E has no number. Count these figures. They count to exactly 666!

It is indeed a remarkable coincidence—or is it a coincidence?—that in BOTH Bible languages—the only two languages we could look in for this number—that the name of the KINGDOM, its founder and first KING, and of every man in the kingdom, counts to exactly 666!

And more remarkable—catch this—no other two words have ever been found in two languages, meaning the same thing, and exactly counting, in the numerical value of those languages, to 666! Certainly THE BEAST stands identified!

Mussolini and the Pope

But the same number—666—is branded on the man who headed the puny "6th head" of the symbolic "Beast," and also on the pope.

Mussolini called himself "Il Duce." Italians shouted "Viva Il Duce!" which means "LONG LIVE THE CHIEF." Everywhere in Italy was the printed sign, "VV IL DUCE." The "VV" is the abbreviation used for "Viva." A "V" is used instead of the "U" as is very commonly done. While this is a greeting, or title, Mussolini actually employed "Il Duce" as a NAME. It is in LATIN. Count it:

V is 5, V is 5, I is 1, L is 50, D is 500, V is 5, C is 100, E has no number. Now count them, and you have exactly 666!

The name of Nero Caesar, Emperor of the Roman Empire at its height, in the Hebrew language, is 666!

Thus this number 666 is indelibly Branded upon the Roman Empire!

But, some will ask, does not this number apply to the POPE? Some teach "the words 'VICARIUS FILII DEI' are on the Pope's triple crown." And these Latin words in the Roman numerals, count to 666!

The pope does, on some occasions, wear a triple crown, BUT THESE WORDS ARE NOT ON IT! We should be careful to PROVE all things. The denomination which reaches this sent Prof. C. T. Ever-son to Rome, where he gained access to, and made diligent search in the Vatican archives, but he could find no crown or record of such a crown containing these words.

Furthermore, these words are in the LATIN, not a BIBLE language. This not a NAME, but a TITLE, and it is THE NAME of the BEAST, and the number of the name of the MAN of the beast we are told to count. Further this title does not apply to a kingdom, or Empire, but alone to a MAN.

However, while "VICARIUS FILII DEI" is not among the acknowledged titles of the pope (See Cath. Encycl.) he does claim to be VICAR OF CHRIST on earth. Also, for 1260 long years the popes did reign and rule over the BEAST. They were, in effect, the actual heads of the Empire, ruling over the emperors, as well as over the Church. And so is it indeed significant that this title, too, counts 666?

And so this number is branded on the Roman Empire, on ROMULUS, the founder and first king of Rome, on Nero Caesar, one of its great Emperors, on the name ROME, on every ROMAN, and even on MUSSOLINI.

Could anything be more conclusive?

Has God Allotted 6000 Years for Man's Self-Rule?

Yes! The world does not understand what is taking place today because it does not know about the 7000-year PLAN of God.

God has allotted approximately 6000 years for humanity to go its own way. These millenniums of human civilization are nearly over. God is about to intervene in world affairs by sending Jesus Christ. Not until He returns will we have 1000 years of peace.

The pattern for this little-understood plan is given in the first two chapters of Genesis. It is the WEEK of seven days. As God originally set time in motion, man is given six work days followed by a day of rest. In Hebrews 4:4,11, the seventh day is mentioned as a type of the peaceful REST—1000-year REST—that will follow the Present Age of human labor and futile struggle to master the earth. The millennium, then, is compared with a "day" of the week.

Observe that after Christ's intervention the time of that peaceful rest under Living Costs Are Rising... but YOU still can be prosperous!

by Herman L. Hoeh

Think of it!—a world filled with peace and prosperity, a happy new world in which nobody has any financial troubles. That is the coming UTOPIA—the wonderful World of Tomorrow!

But why isn't there a utopia today? Why is there no one thing that plagues more people today than the constant worry of making ends meet—the constant round of serious financial difficulties in which many of you find yourselves?

Let us understand!—there is a reason, a cause, for it!

Why Stupendous DEBT?

When you stop to think about it, never in the history of the world were any nations so seemingly rich as are the English speaking and the Western European nations today. Our people possess more developed resources and national wealth than any people ever had before. Yet these very nations owe public and private debts so huge that the next ten generations will not be able to pay them off!

America alone owes over six hundred billion dollars in public and private debt! That means that every individual averages a public and private debt of over $3,600. That is about a $14,400 debt for a family of four! This debt has been piled up because of preparation for war. War is a CURSE!

Something must be wrong! We have lost all sense of the value of money. And no wonder. What most people simply don't know, today, about their financial problems is that the Eternal Creator set definite LAWS in motion—invisible, yet inexorable laws, which regulate personal economic conditions. A KNOWLEDGE of these laws would teach us to recognize the right value of money—would give us joy and happiness by keeping us from life-long financial slavery.

A recent poll of thousands of Americans revealed that not more than 3% of the people ever heard about these divinely established FINANCIAL LAWS. And not even 1% of the people follow these laws that regulate our prosperity!

World Ignorant of These Laws

Let us understand how these financial laws would operate to bring about a utopia—both national and individual—if we obey them.

Everything produced—money and the things money will buy—comes from the earth. You didn't produce the earth—God produced it! You merely apply certain energy in thinking and planning and in labor to the earth, which God created and owns. Where does the energy you expend really come from? It comes from God. You do not create it. You merely utilize what God supplies.

God even set your thinking processes in motion. You are entirely dependent on Him for your life—for every breath you breathe.

Yes, all has come from God. It is God who sustains, preserves in motion, guides and directs all the natural forces and energies. God is not merely a Creator of long ago. He is the living DIRECTOR today. It is God's labor—His thinking, planning and creating—that really produces all. Therefore, God has a claim to ownership of all you have taken for granted that you produced. His claim is valid. It is prior to yours. Notice what God Almighty says:

"The earth is the Eternal's, and the fulness thereof, the world, and they that dwell therein." These inspired words are repeated in the New Testament in I Cor. 10:26.

Yes, even the money—the gold and silver—is God's. "The silver is Mine, and the gold is Mine, saith the Eternal of Hosts" (Haggai 2:8).

Only the foolish would dare to deny this claim of God! Let us admit, then, that our income belongs to God! It is His to do with as He wills in carrying out His plan.

How God's Law Regulates Your Wealth

God is concerned about you. He has your interest and welfare in mind. Therefore God set financial laws in motion regulating that portion of His wealth which your thinking and your labor extracted from the earth and developed.

God's law respecting what you earn is like a contract. He allows you to work on His earth, to use a part of the earth for food and other materials for your livelihood—to utilize its soil, its timber, its water, its coal and oil, and to manufacture products from it. In turn, God wants you to understand you are working with Him in partnership—maintaining and developing what He created.

But God is generous. In this partnership, God turns over to you as your own not 5% or 20% or even 50%—but 90% of all that you produce! And even the small fraction which He reserves for Himself He spends for the purpose of disseminating to the people His message, His laws of life, that free us from financial fears and worries and give us peace of mind and enduring happiness, abundant joy and life eternal!

Think of it! God uses the one tenth of all that we produce to help improve us materially and spiritually, and to reveal to this unhappy starving world the knowledge of His laws which, if obeyed, would produce Utopia! He keeps nothing for Himself.

God's financial laws are for man's good. Obedience to God's laws brings blessings. "Prove me (by returning to God His tenth) now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it" (Malachi 3:10).

When we violate His laws, we bring curses upon ourselves—fears and worries, frustration, unhappiness and death! "You are cursed with a curse: for you have robbed me, even this whole nation."

"Wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings" (Malachi 3:9-10).

But God has ordained it that if He receives His rightful 10%, as a partner, of what is produced from the earth, the 90% which He gives us will soon grow bigger and accomplish more for us than we alone could ever have done with the entire 100%.

God actually pays us for keeping the RELATIONSHIP! "And all nations shall call you BLESSED: for you shall be a delightsome LAND, saith the Eternal of hosts" (Malachi 3:12).

It is time we understand the duties we owe God. The nations today have robbed God by withholding their tithes and are under a curse. BUT you, individually, can prosper by tithing!

Abraham Paid Tithes

Abraham was prosperous. He knew the laws which bring financial prosperity. He tithed!

Abraham paid God his tithes. God's representative who collected the tithe was the High Priest Melchisedek (Heb. 7:1-2 and Genesis 14:18-20).

TITHEING was known from the earliest times!

Melchisedek taught God's laws—the law of tithing among them—in considerable detail, long before the time of Moses. MELCHISEDEC USED THE TITHES HE RECEIVED IN THE FURTHERING OF GOD'S MINISTRY.

The King of Sodom was present with Abraham when he paid Melchisedec the tithes. The Bible would not have termed the Sodomites wicked SINNERS unless they had heard the law as a result of Melchisedec's ministry (Rom. 5:13).

Abraham continued throughout life to obey God's laws, which included the law of tithing (Gen. 26:3, 5).

That's why Abraham prospered!

Remember, tithes belong to Melchisedec. The tithes were paid directly to Him in patriarchal times for the purpose of carrying on God's ministry to individuals.

But a change took place in the days of Moses. In the days of Moses, Melchisedec ordered something NEW—the tithes were paid to Him through MEN acting as His representatives. God's ministry through the Levites became a material, ritualistic ministry of reminding an entire nation of their failure to obey His laws.

The Levites used the tithes to minister to the people in the manner God had commanded for that time. Melchisedec, the Father's High Priest, still supervised but stepped into the background, letting MEN carry out the plan of God.

Melchisedec Ministry Reappears!

Melchisedec of the Old Testament again appeared as the High Priest of the New Testament. As High Priest, He came as the Lamb of God to sacrifice Himself for the sins of all those who had lived before His coming and for the sins of those who would live after Him, so they could enter the coming Kingdom of God.

He came to qualify as ruler of this world. He came to train messengers who would proclaim to an unbelieving and slumbering world His imminent return to establish His government here on earth. He is Christ—OUR PRESENT HIGH PRIEST!

Let's compare the Old Testament Levitical Priesthood with the New Testament ministry established by Christ for carrying out His work today.

IN OLD TESTAMENT TIMES—between the time of Moses and Christ—under the Old Covenant, God's ministry was purely national, for Israel alone. Its blessings were purely material—promises OF earthly wealth and power in return for obedience. There were no spiritual promises for salvation. A constant round of animal sacrifices were required as a reminder of sin, so they could be allowed to remain in their land. They had no promise whatever of salvation, for the Holy Spirit, which makes a change of nature and salvation possible, was not promised until after Christ came and ascended. John 14:26; 16:7; Acts 2:38.

Melchisedec, (the One who became Christ) selected the Levites as His ministers. Every Levite was a priest, or minister. MELCHISEDEC ORDAINED A CHANGE IN THE TITHING LAW—HE TURNED THE TENTH HE HAD ALWAYS PERSONALLY RECEIVED OVER TO THE LEVITES FOR MINISTERING HIS WORK.

He thereby transferred receipt of the tithe from Himself to the support of the LEVITICAL PRIESTHOOD. There was no spreading of the Gospel. God's plan then called for the Levites to teach the people the law in the LETTER. The people were commanded to support them.

TODAY, there is no Levitical priesthood—the Levitical ministers are gone. Melchisedec, "who abides High Priest continually," assumed the form of a mortal man, and paid for the sins of all mankind, as the Lamb of God. As a result, the Father has made available His own Holy Spirit, the power which makes possible the keeping of God's LAW IN THE RIGHT SPIRIT—or attitude. Christ came to this earth to inaugurate a NEW KIND OF MINISTRY—A SPIRITUAL MINISTRY—a ministry of SALVATION, a ministry of WARNING, OF PROPHESYING OF His imminent return as world ruler!

Christ chose His original twelve disciples, or ministers, while He was here. Today all true ministers of Jesus Christ are called by special spiritual call from God through His Holy Spirit. Christ, commissioning His ministers today, says "This GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the END (of this age) come."

Our Work Today

A "door" signifies the opportunity to carry the Gospel to far countries (II Cor. 2:12, 13).

Paul preached the Gospel 19 years in his own country, Asia Minor. Just 19 years later "a door was opened" (remember, the Bible interprets itself) to Paul to go to a far country—Europe—and preach the Gospel.

Now NOTICE! Starting in 1934, Mr. Armstrong preached the Gospel over the radio to America only, for 19 years. Then a "door was opened" to Europe in 1953—exactly 19 years after He first began preaching, and now he is reaching not only Europe over its most powerful radio station—Radio Luxembourg, but also the world!

Mr. Armstrong's voice and those of our other ministers, are now carried WORLD-WIDE BY RADIO TO REACH MILLIONS THROUGH OUR "WORLD TOMORROW" PROGRAM. Our publications, The PLAIN TRUTH magazine and the AMBASSADOR COLLEGE BIBLE CORRE-
What do you think God will do? Something different than He has always done for disobedience? No! Listen! Joel 1 says He will weaken us with famine, then Ezek. 5:5, 12 shows He will raise a foe against us who will remove us from our land. The United States hasn't paid God His rent, so our people will be removed from this land!

This is a serious thing—and the time is not far away when this nation is to experience God's first step in removing our people from their land. But you, individually, can escape if you study God's commands and obey His laws.

God says He has commanded us to pay tithes and offerings, but most haven't! Have you?

Question Box

His rule is specifically termed "a thousand years" (Rev. 20:4). If the last "day" of God's 7000-year plan is 1000 years, then the preceding six days which He has allotted for mankind to work out his own ideas would amount to 6000 years. And this is exactly what world events are proving today! Look about you! It is obvious that this world is crashing to its DOOM!

Now notice your Bible. Many Bibles are complete enough to contain chronological charts showing that human life was created slightly more than 4000 years before Christ. And almost another 2000 years have elapsed since—making nearly 6000 years of human civilization to date. In other words, the trend of world events is now proving we are very near the time the Scriptures have always said Christ will return—when the probability of world destruction would become a reality (Matt. 24:22). Six thousand years of human history have almost been completed. Here then is proof—double proof—that Christ is coming in our generation!

The common assumption that man has lived on earth countless tens of thousands of years is an idle dream. Reason disproves it. Each new archeological discovery aids in disproving it. True science disproves it! Strange as it may seem, the theory of man's evolution is not only unproved, but irrefutably disproved when we understand the facts.

The apostles did not fully understand this plan of God when Christ was yet on earth. They thought the kingdom would be established in their day—after only about 4000 years of God's plan had been completed. But before they died, the apostles knew God's plan. Peter said: "The Lord is not slack concerning the promise (of Christ's coming). . . but is longsuffering" (2 Peter 3:9). God is patient. He has refrained from intervening in world affairs for nearly 6000 years. Why?

Because He will not intervene until humanity is forced to cry out to Him for fear of self-extinction. Recall that the day of Christ's intervention and rule is compared to "a thousand years" (Rev. 20:4). Peter also wrote the same thing—that a day in God's plan is as "a thousand years," and "a thousand years" of human civilization as one day in His planned week of seven thousand years (2 Peter 3:8).

Peter knew that Christ would intervene shortly before the close of 6000 years of human struggle and slavery—that God would send Jesus Christ to set up His government for the seventh thousand years, which will usher in a time of rest and peace—a sabbatical rest!

How marvellous that in our day, at the very time that 6000 years have almost elapsed, the world is threatened with extinction of life. And Jesus Himself said that when we see this taking place He would come again!

number, I was given a Real Estate beat, and the salary raised to $8 per week.

I was put on a regular "beat," calling daily on a certain number of Real Estate brokers to pick up their ads. Here again, I started writing ads for them. Results were increased. More and more the dealers on my route began using large ads in the Capital, using less space in the "R. & L."

It was on this job that I became known as a "hustler." I walked at a pace that was almost a run. It was drive, drive, DRIVE!! all morning long—until the 1:00 PM deadline. Then the afternoons were spent in the office preparing form solicitations, to which were attached clipped want-ads from the other local papers, or even those of other cities, which were mailed out. Thus I learned to sell want-ads by mail. This knowledge landed an important job, later.

It was not long until Ivan Coolidge, then want-ad manager over at the "R. & L." asked me to drop over and see him. He offered me $10 a week if I'd leave The Capital and join the Register staff. Later on, Ivan established an advertising agency of his own in Des Moines, which, I believe, gained some prominence—but he was unfortunately cut off somewhere in mid-life by premature death.

I told Ivan I wanted to consult my uncle before giving him my decision.

"So," chuckled my Uncle Frank, with the wisdom of a Ben Franklin, "the opposition is beginning to feel the pressure, eh? Want to hire you away from the Capital—willing to pay $10 a week to stop the competition, are they? Well, now listen, Herbert. A little encouragement once in a while is very helpful. It shows you are making good. You can get some inspiration out of it to provide incentive to keep driving yourself on. But I've noticed that there has been a tendency in some branches of our family to keep shifting around all the time from one thing to another—never staying with one thing long enough to make a success of it. There's a good deal to the old adage, after all, that a rolling stone gathers no moss. One of the great success lessons you need to learn is persistence—to stay with a thing.

"Now suppose you quit the Capital and go over to the Register. You wouldn't learn anything about the advertising profession over there than you're learning where you are. The only advantage is the $2 per week. You'd probably blow that in, and ten years from now you wouldn't remember having had it. I think the time has come for you to pay the $2 a week to learn the important lesson of staying with a thing. Every week, when you draw your $8 at the Capital, remember you are paying the extra $2 you might be getting at the Register as the price of that lesson, and I think you'll remember it."

I had started out to spend one year in want-ads at the Capital. The temptation had come to weaken and get off that schedule.

I took my uncle's advice and stayed on the schedule.

Learning Rules of Success

Thus, at the early age of 18, some of the seven important rules of success were being learned.

The first success rule is fixing the right goal—avoid fitting the "square peg in the round hole." I was yet to learn the real purpose of life, or the one true supreme goal. Actually I had set out on a wrong goal—that of becoming some one "important," achieving business success for the purpose of making money. But at least I had made the self-analysis and the survey of vocations to find where I should fit within the realm of business, the field of this goal. At least, ambition had been kindled. And, the little realized at the time, all this experience was building the necessary foundation for the vocation God was later to call me into.

The second success rule is education—fitting oneself for the achievement of the goal. I was getting, not mere impractical and theoretical classroom book education, but the combined education of book study at night and practical experience in the day-time. And even here, the self-education being received was precisely that required properly to fit one for the big and real calling which was later to come from God. It was the preparation for this present work of God, without which this work today could never have become a success.

The third rule of success is good, vigorous health. Food plays a major part in this, and I was not to learn of the importance of food and diet until I was 37 or 38 years old. But I had learned the importance of sufficient exercise, deep breathing, frequent bathing and elimination, and sufficient sleep.

The fourth rule, drive, putting a consistent prod on oneself, seems to have come naturally as a result of the ambition that had been generated at sixteen. There was always the sense that I had to hurry! I was learning to plunge into a task with dynamic energy.

The fifth, resourcefulness, or thinking about the problem at hand, also, was unconsciously being developed by experience. For example, the experience on the "goat work" job, and then in finding a way to get in room-for-rent ads faster by telephone, was an example of learning this rule by experience—thinking thru, and applying initiative, to a better way of solving a problem. Most people do such a job just as they are shown, without ever applying thought or resourcefulness to the activity.

And now, the sixth rule, perseverance, never quitting when it appears to everyone else one has failed, was being learned at the very low price of $2 per weekly lesson.

In 1947, and again in 1948 this present great work of God appeared hopelessly to have failed. It seemed everyone else knew we had come to the "end of our rope." It has happened many times. But that $2 per week lesson learned at age 18, coupled with faith in God, acquired much later, turned a seeming hopeless failure into a world-wide ever-expanding success.

The seventh and most important rule, Divine Guidance, I was not to learn until... much later. Nevertheless, I can look back now and marvel at the way every step of experience in those early years was a step toward preparation for the work to which God later called.

God has a way of training, long before their actual call, those whom He proposes to call to a special mission. Moses was trained in the king's palace for his later mission. Daniel was trained at Nebuchadnezzar's palace. Paul was trained for his ultimate mission while actually running the opposite direction, persecuting Christians. Peter Waldo was trained in business life, before his call, in the middle ages.

The First Side-Step from the Goal

But now came a big mistake in judgment.

As the scheduled year of training in daily newspaper want-ads drew to a close, a flattering offer came. And this time I failed to seek out the advice of my uncle Frank who had wisely steered my life so far.

On The Daily Capital staff was a book critic, Emile Stapp, who edited a Book Review department. Her desk was on the second floor adjacent to the want-ad and display advertising section. She had, apparently, observed my work, noted I was energetic and produced results. She was a sister-in-law, as I remember, of W. O. Finkbine, one of two millionaire brothers who owned and operated the Green Bay Lumber Company, with lumber yards scattered all over Iowa; the Finkbine Lumber Company, a large lumber manufacturing company in Wiggins, Mississippi; and operating a 17,000-acre wheat ranch in Canada.

Miss Stapp lived with her sister, Mrs. W. O. Finkbine, "out on the Avenue," as we called it—meaning the millionaire residence street of Des Moines, West Grand Avenue. I doubt very much that all the residents of that fabled street were millionaires, but at least so it seemed to those of us who were of ordinary means in Des Moines.

One day, near the end of my year at The Capital, Miss Stapp told me she had spoken to Mr. Finkbine, and I was being offered the job of Timekeeper and Paymaster at the big lumber mill in southern Mississippi. I was first to work a short period in the company's commissary store, managed by her brother, whose name I believe was Mr. Hal Stapp.

The job sounded flattering. The prospect of travel to far-off southern Mississippi had alluring appeal. I succumbed to it, going off on a tangent from the planned advertising career. This was to teach me a stern lesson by cruel experience about hewing to the line.

The First Meeting with a Millionaire

Before leaving, I was to go to the office of Mr. W. O. Finkbine for a short talk of instruction. I shall never forget my visit to the headquarters offices of this lumber firm. I met also Mr. E. C. Finkbine, President of the corporation. W. O. was Vice President.

It was my first experience meeting millionaires. It made a terrific impression. I was awed. There seemed to be something in the appearance and personalities of these men that simply radiated power. It was instantly apparent that they were men of higher caliber than men I had known—men of greater ability. There was an expression of intensity and of positive, confident power, which seemed to radiate about them, and affected one who came within proximity of it. I could see that they were men who had studied, used their minds continually, dynamically, and positively.

Of course I was over-impressed, due to the plastic susceptibilities and inexperience of youth. A very few years later I began meeting so many millionaires that they began appearing quite ordinary, after all—just HUMAN!

I was taken into the private office of W. O. Finkbine. He wanted to give me a little general advice before sending a young man so far away from home. I have never forgotten what he said.

"We are going to send you down with the manager of our Canadian interests," he said. This man's name I do not remember now. It was early January, and he was going down to Wiggins for a vacation, and to inspect the company's operations there, during the off-season in Canada. I had never been farther from Des Moines than Omaha and Sioux City. It was a THRILL to look forward to the trip, first to seeing Chicago, then the deep South.

"First, I want to give you some advice about travelling," said Mr. Finkbine.

"Most people look upon it as an extravagance to ride in the Pullman cars on trains. They are wrong. As you're starting on your first long trip from home, I want to impress on you the importance of always travelling in a Pullman car, except when you simply do not have the money to do so.

"First of all, especially at your age, we are influenced by everyone we come in contact with. On the Pullmans you will come in contact with a more successful class of people. This will have more influence than you can realize, now, on your future success in life. Then in the Pullmans it is not only cleaner, but safer.

"Now," he continued, "whenever you stop at a hotel, the same principle applies. Always stop at the leading hotel in any city. If you want to economize, get the minimum-priced room, but always go to the best hotel. You are among more successful people, which will influence your own success. The best hotels are either fire-proof or more nearly so—always safer—worth the little difference, if any, in cost as insurance against accident or fire. You are a young man, just getting started in life. Try to throw yourself into the company of as many successful men as possible. Study them. Try to learn why they are successful. This will help you learn how to build a success for yourself."

I did not disdain his advice. There have been many times in my life when I did not have enough money to travel on Pullman cars, or stay in the best hotels. Under such circumstances, I have travelled as I could afford—and I have travelled a great deal since that eventful day in early January, 1912—in fact a goodly portion of my life has been spent in travelling, as you will see as this autobiography progresses.

Since we moved to Pasadena, ten and a half years ago, I have learned that these Finkbine brothers later retired from business, and moved to Pasadena. Very often, these days, I drive past the home where W. O. Finkbine lived in retirement, and died. One lesson in life he apparently never learned. When a man decides he already has achieved success, and retires—quits—he never lives long. I expect to stay in harness as long as I live—in God's work until Christ comes, unless He cuts short my life before that. time. But I hope, and somehow believe, that God in His mercy will grant me the matchless privilege of living to see that most glorious event of all earth's history.

Introduction to the South

We boarded a Pullman car in Des Moines one night—my first experience riding in one. I think I was too excited to sleep much, wanting to see as much of the scenery as possible—especially my first glimpse of the great Mississippi River as we crossed it between Davenport and Rock Island.

There was a cold blizzard on our arrival in Chicago next morning. The ground was covered with snow. We went over to see Michigan Avenue. I was thrilled. We went thru "Peacock Alley," a very long and narrow lobby, nationally famous, in the Congress Hotel, and walked thru the tunnel under the street connecting it with the Auditorium Hotel. I think we visited the Stock Yards, taking the first ride in my experience on an "L" (Elevated train).

Later that morning, we boarded the famous all-Pullman "Panama Limited" on the Illinois Central Railroad at 12th Street Station. Going into the diner for lunch and again for dinner was an exciting experience—I had never seen the inside of a diner before. It was a new experience to learn about tipping waiters, redcaps, porters, bellboys — but my companion was an experienced traveller, and this initiation into the "ropes" of travelling was under good tutelage. I learned fast. Night came all too soon, and this time I slept soundly in my berth.

Early next morning the train arrived in Jackson, Mississippi, where we changed for a local train on the "G." I was not just amused—but intensely interested. Also I was instructed, before starting out, how many children you have.

Arriving in Wiggins, I found a room in town, some little walk from the commissary store and the lumber mill, just outside of town, and was quickly introduced to my job in the store. Saturday night was the big night at the store. The mill employees were paid Saturday evening, and thronged the store. I was broken in immediately as "soda-fountain jerker."

One of the first men I met was a colored man I shall never forget—whose name was Hub Evans. One of the men in the store brought him around to me.

"Hub," he said, "Tell Mr. Armstrong how many children you have."

"Thutty-six, suh," replied old Hub, promptly and proudly—"hope t' make it fory 'to Ah die!

I was not just amused—but intensely interested.

"Tell me, Hub," I responded, "how many wifes have you had?"

"Only three, suh!" Hub was a proud man. But because I was from "up noth" and new, and friendly, I was to have a show-down with him later with my job at stake.

The New Job

After not more than a very few weeks, I was transferred over to the mill office as time-keeper and pay-master. Later I learned that only a short time before, this job had been shared by three men, and all of them men of ability—one of whom was now the town's leading real-estate dealer in Wiggins, another was now the company's bookkeeper, and the third the assistant manager of the company.

The company was logging timber off a big tract east of Wiggins. It had its own railroad, by which the logs were brought in to the mill. About 350 negro men were employed, beside various department managers and top-ranking skilled employees, all white.

As mentioned above, these negroes of 46 years ago had received little or no education. I do not believe there was a man of this entire force who could write his own name. All statements were signed with an "X"—"His mark." This was a legal signature.

I learned at once that the colored employees had to be paid three times a day. Yes, that's what I said—three times a day—morning, noon, and night. They had never been trained in the handling of money. Had they been paid only once a week, they and their families would have starved before next pay-day, for they were nearly always "broke" before Monday morning.

But the company paid them in cash only on Saturday night. At all other times, they were paid in trade-checks on the commissary store — good only in trade. Again, had they been paid in cash, many of them, or their wives and children, would have starved, for they would have immediately gambled away their cash by "shooting craps," before they could get to the store to purchase food.

Also I was instructed, before starting the job, that no negro could be paid a single nickel more than he already had earned. If he were, and he were able to figure it up and know it, he would drift off to the next town and get a job in some other mill, rather than come back on the job and work out anything he had already been paid.

Consequently, all department managers had to turn in their time-books to my office twice daily—noon, and night. I had to keep the record on the books of the exact number of hours, and rate of pay, of each man, kept current up to the half-day. This was some bookkeeping job!
In this installment of Mr. Armstrong's autobiography you read of the experiences of his formative years, which formed the all-important groundwork for the later founding and developing of Ambassador College shown here.

I sat up to a high counter, on a high stool, behind a wire cage across the rear of a large, plain room. Employes came into this room, and up to the window in this wire cage.

Saturday afternoons, I had to have the exact time worked by every employe figured to the very nickel, with all deductions of checks on the commissary store subtracted, and the net balance due each employe, to the nickel. Then I had to figure, by a special process of figuring in which I was instructed, exactly how many nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars, dollars, $5 bills, etc., were needed to make each pay-envelope come out exactly right. Then came the trip to the bank. I had to draw out the exact amount of the pay-roll, in these precise amounts of each denomination.

Then it was a rush back to the office, and get the correct amount in each pay-envelope with each employe's name on it. This was a fast and furious rush job.

The negro employes all lived in a special colony of company-owned houses—or, more accurately, shack. They were of unpainted wood, and, as nearly as I remember now, no plaster or interior finish on inside walls.

Strange Experiences

It was necessary to collect the house-rent—pardon me, I mean shack-rent—on a regular daily basis from the employes' pay, even before paying them any checks on the company store. That, too, had to be calculated and subtracted.

Occasionally on a Sunday I would, in company with one or more companions, stroll out thru this section of company shacks for negro employes. Here and there would be a group of colored men "shooting craps."

One Sunday I found a wedding was about to take place. I went inside the house where it was to be held. I found wall-paper had been pasted over the unpainted bare wood boards. It was very colorful wall-paper — the color comic sections out of Sunday newspapers!

I wanted to get some kodak shots of the wedding, so I asked them to have the wedding on the front porch. They gladly obliged. I haven't seen that camera print for years, but will make another search of old pictures and if it is found before press date, will print it with this installment.

Often on a Monday morning, two or three department managers would report to me that they were short a certain number of men. It was then my job to take the revolver the management had always lying on the counter beside me, and go out into the district of the company shacks, and round up the missing employes. I soon learned that if any employes had any of Saturday night's cash left by Monday morning, they wouldn't come to work until it was all spent.

Usually I found the needed employes out doors in a little group "shooting craps." I had to brandish the revolver, and herd them back to the mill about as one would herd cattle. This was a strange experience for a 19-year-old from "up north"—but it was my job as I had been instructed in it.

Another experience that caused me to wonder was this: Very frequently while I was there some employe would come to my office for a permit, which I had to sign, so he could go to the doctor. Each time the employe had been in an accident — nearly always self-inflicted deliberately. Occasionally one of those men would deliberately have a finger cut off, in order to obtain several days' lay-off from work at full pay. Some of them would gladly sacrifice a finger for several days' idleness on full company pay!

The Crisis Brewing

One day the manager of the mill, Mr. Hickman, called me into his office.

"Herbert," he said, "I hate to say this, but I see trouble brewing that's going to cost you your job, unless you handle the situation when it comes. You've come down here from the north. I know it may not seem exactly right to you the way we have to keep negroes in their place. But if we didn't we couldn't live here. They are not educated, and they are not trained in emotional self-control. It's absolutely true that if you give one of them an inch, he'll take a mile. Perhaps some day, when the colored people of the south become educated, things will be different.

"But these negroes know that you are from the north, and that you mean to be friendly to them—and that's all right, as long as you make them keep their distance. But I sense that something is brewing—I don't know just what, or when it will strike—but it will be soon. They are going to put you on the spot. They are going to try something. They are going to see if they can break you down—and if they do, we'll have to get you out of here fast to protect your life. If you once give them the upper hand, you'll be in danger.

"Somehow, sometime soon, they will try to defy your authority. If you let them get away with it, you'll be worth nothing to this company any longer."

I was really frightened. Nor at what the colored men might do — I didn't fear that—but at the prospect of being "fired."

To me, the idea of being "fired" would be the biggest disgrace that could come. The fear of being fired really alerted me—spurred me on to a determination that, no matter what came, I had to master the situation!

It was not long in coming.

Teen-age Bravado

A few days later, during noon-hour, a large crowd of negro men led by Hub Evans started coming into my office. There was an office rule that all negroes must take their hats off in the office and no smoking was allowed.

Old Hub came in with a cigarette hanging disdainfully from his insolent, sneering lips, his hat slanted cockily on one side of his head. He started boldly right down the center toward my window. The other men sidled rapidly down the side walls of the room, their hats off and without any cigarettes. This was it!

In a flash, I knew my job was at stake. This was all the inspiration I needed.

"Hub Evans," the words came, teen-age bravo-like, sharp, staccato, and loud, with stern authority, "take that cigarette out of your mouth, and snap that hat off your head!"

Old Hub only grinned more insolently, snorting lips, his hat slanted cockily on one side of his head. He started boldly right down the center toward my window. The other men sidled rapidly down the side walls of the room, their hats off and without any cigarettes. This was it!

In a flash, I knew my job was at stake.

This was all the inspiration I needed.

"Hub Evans," the words came, teen-age bravado-like, sharp, staccato, and loud, with stern authority, "take that cigarette out of your mouth, and snap that hat off your head!"

Old Hub only grinned more insolently, and took another step forward. But before he could take a second step, my hand was on the revolver, and I levelled it at his head.
"I won't tell you again, Hub!" I snapped sternly and loudly, "I'm counting THREE, then I'm SHOOTING your hat off, and your cigarette out of your mouth—ONE, TWO—"

I never got to three.

For a brief minute, old Hub Evans turned WHITE, and ran out that front door like a frightened deer, leaving hat and cigarette behind him on the floor.

The others were all now awe-struck.

I continued to brandish the revolver.

"Now, CLEAN OUT OF HERE!" I thundered, "every one of you! And don't you come back, until you come back obeying company rules!"

There was almost panic as they piled up over one another trying to rush out.

The crisis had come—and been met!

I still had my job!

A Fish Out of Water

But not for long.

I was a square peg in a round hole. I had fixed a life GOAL in the advertising profession, where self analysis had shown I fit. Already the lesson I had paid $2 per week to learn had been forgotten, or overlooked temporarily. The glamour of getting to travel to far-off southern Mississippi, combined with the flattery of being offered such a job as a result of my record during that year in want-ads, had momentarily blinded me to my previously fixed purpose. Of course, travel is an important phase of education—so this 6-month side-tracking was not wasted time.

Even to this day I frequently find myself digressing, temporarily, from the fixed subject during a sermon. But these temporary digressions usually have proved to be more valuable to the hearers than the planned material, and I do always seem to get right back on the main beam. It was like that in this early experience. I think now that God saw to it that I was soon yanked back on the main track. But lessons were learned in this southern Mississippi detour which became part of the training for the real purpose God had for my life.

I have mentioned that this job combined the work previously done by three capable men, now risen to more important jobs. It was not the kind of work into which I fit. It was, as we say, out of my line. I was a fish out of water. A square peg in a round hole.

In order to keep up with the job, due to inadaptability and resultant slowness, it became necessary to work nights. I established a system. I worked alternately one night until ten, the next until midnight, rising at 5:30 every morning. Time had to be taken out to walk the one or two miles from my room to the mill, and also to walk over to the boarding house where I took meals. I kept awake on the job nights by smoking a pipe—my first habitual smoking. In just six months this overwork and loss of sleep exacted its toll, and I was sent to the hospital with typhoid fever.

Escape from Death

But during this six months in Wiggins there were a few social events. One was a pre-World War I encounter with a German, in which I narrowly escaped being shot to death.

I took meals at a boarding house out near the mill. The daughter of the landlady was an attractive southern brunette near my age, whose fiancé was away at college. I had a few dates with her—but, I think, quite unlike most dating today. There was no "necking" as today's youngsters call it. Indeed I had never yet kissed or had my arms around a girl. It just wasn't done, then, on the universal scale of these post-war days. Two world wars have brought greater social and moral changes than most people realize—and all bad.

Oh yes,—now I remember that girl's name. Couldn't think of it when I began writing about her in the paragraph above. It was Matti-Lee Hornsby. I do not remember whether there were any movies in Wiggins in those days. If so I'm sure they must have been closed on Sundays, and I had no time when it could have been possible to go on any other day. The few dates I had were on Sundays, and consisted of walking and of conversation.

That kind of date would seem pretty "dull" to most 19-year-olds today, I suppose. I wonder if it isn't because they have lost the art of interesting conversation. I have always found that a scintillating conversation can be far more interesting than a prefabricated day-dream in a movie or before a TV set—far more stimulating, enjoyable, and beneficial than the mind-dulling lust-inciting pastime called "necking."

But more of the dating experiences later. I had not had a great many dates up to this time. One thing, however, sticks to my memory—whenever Matti-Lee became a little provoked with me, her dark eyes flashed and she snapped out the epithet: "YANKEE!" It was, of course, half in fun—but I found that epithet was supposed to be insulting. I had never heard it before.

My parents had started me taking piano lessons when I was 8 years of age. For four long years my mother stood over me more or less frequently with a switch in hand to keep me on that piano bench. By age 12 I had learned that, to become a real concert pianist, one had to spend at least 8 hours a day practicing the piano. Besides, I was getting pretty big for my mother to whip. I haven't taken a lesson since age 12, but have continued to play occasionally for my own enjoyment—never, I'm sure, for the enjoyment of others. Today I seldom find time for the piano—and one cannot play well unless kept in constant practice.

But in those early years the piano playing led to many temporary social contacts. There was a piano at the Hornsby boarding house. Actually, I think some of the "dating" took place around that piano—for I could really swing the rag-time and jazz in those days—but not any more.

One acquaintance made there was a young German. He must have been about 21 at the time. His father was a lumberman in Germany, and had sent the son to America to study American lumber methods. He was spending some few weeks at the Finkbine mill in Wiggins.

This German, whose name I do not remember, bragged at length on the superiority of German products, methods and systems. One day, in his room at the boarding house, he was demonstrating to me the superiority of his German-made revolver over a Colt or other American make.

In play, he pointed the revolver straight at me.

"Don't point that at me!" I said, dodging.

"Oh, it isn't loaded," he laughed.
"Look, if you’re afraid, I’ll point it away from you and show you."

He pointed the revolver a couple of feet to one side of me, and pulled the trigger.

It was a very superior weapon, all right. It drilled a hole completely thru the wall of his room, and let a little round ray of sunlight shine thru from outdoors!

My German friend turned white, and trembled in confusion.

"Why," he stammered in frightened embarrassment, "I was sure it wasn’t loaded."

It is the gun “that isn’t loaded” that has killed many people. And before I leave this little digression, may I respectfully suggest to all who read this that you teach—yes, really TEACH your children never, under any circumstances, to point even a play-gun at any person. The life you save may be your own!

In the Hospital

My stay in southern Mississippi was brought to a sudden and rude halt. By summer, weakened by overwork and loss of sleep in the desperate struggle to make good on a job I didn’t belong in, a tiny typhoid germ, according to medical theories, found fertile soil. I became delirious. The mill officials, on doctor’s orders, had me taken to the Southern Mississippi Infirmary at Hattiesburg. I entered there with the worst case in the hospital’s history. I was unconscious for two or three days.

But just to be able to stay in bed, after that six months’ grind with all too little sleep seemed so good that somehow I “snapped out of it” quicker, apparently, than any other case they had ever had, and recovery was rapid.

One thing I want to mention here, for the benefit of a very large portion of my readers. It isn’t often considered “nice” to talk about it, but constipation is called by some medical men “the mother of all diseases.” A large percentage of people are plagued with it. For some two years I had been. Cathartics give only temporary relief. There isn’t a cure in a car-load.

In the hospital I was forced to fast. Daily they gave me caster oil. UGH! I have never taken it since, but I can taste the nasty stuff yet! They fed me only lemon juice, and occasionally buttermilk.

When I left the hospital the constipation was cured. Fasting, on raw fresh fruits (no bananas), will cure it, if you will keep it up long enough. I did not undervalue the blessing of being rid of this thing. I appreciated it enough to be sure that I kept regular. I have never permitted that condition to return. That fact alone is responsible for a large part of whatever dynamic energy I have been able to give to God’s great work!

One of the 7 basic rules of SUCCESS is GOOD HEALTH! I hope this is enough said. You can’t overestimate its importance.

In the hospital I was the favorite patient of practically all the nurses. Most of them were just a few years older than I—but not so much that we did not enjoy a great deal of conversation while I was convalescing. My room became a sort of social rendezvous for the nurses. Often there would be five or six of them in there at a time. I really enjoyed this rest in the hospital—the release from that frightening responsibility of trying so desperately to keep up with a job in which I did not belong, getting ample rest and sleep at last.

But I have always believed in the admonition: “Whosoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might,” even tho I didn’t know it was in the Bible (Eccl. 9:10) until much later. I gave that job all I had. Now, in later life, there is some satisfaction in looking back on that.

The doctors told me I would have to return back north to protect my health. Thus, by forces outside my control, I was jerked out of this misfit detour job, and I had learned, now, the lesson for which I sacrificed $2 a week the year before.

Arriving back in Des Moines, Iowa, I went this time to seek my uncle’s advice. Now began my real advertising career. I think the story picks up in interest at this point.

How I “hired myself a job” on the one magazine where I could learn the most, and began to really “go places” will be described in the next installment.

Inside South America

The Pampa—the Argentine prairie. This broad, vast grassland stretches for hundreds of miles in all directions and is covered with grass and other pasturage. There were also fields of wheat, corn and similar products that one would find in Iowa, Illinois and other states in the American Midwest. We could see cattle grazing here and there across the Pampa with a few ranch houses and other buildings now and then, although the whole area appeared empty because of the vastness of each farm or ranch.

Soon we landed at the Buenos Aires airport. Immediately after landing we could feel the effects of Italian and German influence in Argentina.

The airport building itself is a magnificent structure of three or four stories surrounded by well kept grounds with a swimming pool, a restaurant and a place to lounge while waiting for the planes. This is quite a contrast to the barn that was in Chile. We began to see that the customs officials were more courteous and more courteous as we were processed through the same procedure that we had encountered in other of the Latin American countries.

It took us about an hour and a half to reach downtown and we checked into the Hotel Alvear, which is one of the nicer hotels, although it is not in the downtown section of Buenos Aires.

On Sunday, July 14 we were met by Mr. Wilson Sidwell, an American, who is a friend of some of the Pasadena brethren. Mr. Sidwell has been in Argentina for about 43 years and has helped develop some of the northern provinces of the country. He, at the present time, is advisor to the president of the company that processes the Argentine or Paraguayan tea called yerba mate.

Mr. Sidwell was able to give us a great deal of information about the Perón regime and the differences between the present provisional government and the one that Perón headed. He stated that under the Perón regime there was abso-lately no liberty. He had to keep all of his financial records in another country and had to watch his speech—he was not able to say anything at all contrary to the government or even to express any thought of his own.

He stated that the German companies had been in virtual control of the country prior to the overthrow of Perón last year. Since that time the German companies have been divested of their control over the government. But at the present time some of them are beginning to regain control.

The Fake Atom-Bomb Project

During our conversation, Mr. Sidwell pointed out that Mr. Perón was talked into building a project to develop atomic power near the village of San Carlos de Bariloche near the foothills of the Andes. I mentioned to him that we had read reports during the Bogotá conference that Argentina had discovered a cheaper method of making the atomic bomb and that they were at that time in possession of that instrumentality of death. Mr. Sidwell laughed. He said that the German scientists had spent a great deal of money in developing this center in or near San Carlos de Bariloche, but had not developed an atomic bomb. He said the report was circulated in Argentina and also outside of the country in order to make propaganda to give Argentina more voice at the Bogotá conference.

During that Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Sidwell took us on a tour of the city. I was able to get a good many pictures of the industrial developments especially along the banks of the Río de la Plata.

On July 16, we had an interview with members of the National Chamber of Commerce regarding the industrial development and the active control of foreign elements in Argentine industry. We were given the name of the president of the Argentine Industrial Union. We went to his office in order to obtain an interview with him.

On the way over, Mr. Armstrong and I stopped in at the German Embassy. We were treated very courteously and very kindly. We asked the Consul in charge of Industrial Affairs [the counterpart in the American Embassy would be the Commercial Attaché] about the development and the affairs of Argentina was very limited. He began to suggest activities that were available for the typical American tourist, such as riding the various subway lines in Buenos Aires and also the thousands of sightseeing tourists in Buenos Aires. But he did suggest that we see the Commercial Attaché at the American Embassy.

America’s Representatives Abroad

Following his suggestion, Mr. Armstrong and I walked into the American Embassy and were greeted by a receptionist in a very unpolished and offhand manner. We stated that we would like to talk to the Commercial Attaché of the Embassy, and were ushered into the office of a woman. We later found out that she was not the Commercial Attaché. Later we also found out many other things—things that would point out the dangerous situation that American foreign service is in at the present time. This lady, however, knew nothing about the commercial affairs of the United States in Argentina. If she did, she kept that knowledge to herself. We could not get one satisfactory answer out of her—she tried to talk about apartments and the cost of living of the Argentine citizen. She knew nothing about the commercial activities of the United States in Argentina, nor the commercial activity of the various foreign nations. In other words, she was very, very ill-qualified to hold the position that she had. Her rank was Assistant Attaché for Commerce. She did suggest that we talk to the Financial Attaché in the Embassy. I don’t recall his name, but his answers to my questions indicated to me that he, although he had been in Argentina six or seven years, had not been very observant in regard to the United States’ interests nor the activity of other nations. This will give you some idea of why the United States is going downhill—for the very fact that we have sent abroad representatives that are ill-qualified to hold down the jobs they are paid to perform.

Peron’s “Big Lie”

Then we returned for the scheduled interview with Mr. Gambino. He received us very cordially. All the questions we gave him were answered. He was also able to supply us with a large folder of pictures that were taken by the Argentine Industrial Union to promote the

WHY THE PLAIN TRUTH HAS NO SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

So many ask: "How can you publish a magazine, without subscription price, and without advertising?"

The answer is simple. The GOSPEL must go to the whole world, and it must go FREE. It must not be sold like merchandise. Freely ye have received, freely give. Without money and without price, it is God’s way. We proclaim the Gospel. FREE GIVE. Without money and without price, it is God’s way. We proclaim the Gospel. FREE GIVE. Without money and without price, it is God’s way. We proclaim the Gospel. FREE GIVE.

God’s way is the way of LOVE—and that is the way of giving. God expects every true child of His to GIVE of their riches and offerings that His work may go FREE; that His true ministers may GIVE the precious Gospel to others. We simply TRUST GOD to lay it on the minds and hearts of His people to give of their tithes and offerings that we may be enabled to GIVE the good things of God’s Word to the hundreds of thousands who hear the Message over the air, and the scores of thousands who read The PLAIN TRUTH.

Many times our faith has been severely tried, but God has never failed us. We must not fail Him!
The Argentine industrial activity. We had hitherto been unable to get any official pictures of the industrial activity in Argentina. This interview was reported to you in an article that was written by Mr. Ted Armstrong, so I will not go into details about it. It was very successful and it gave us a great insight into the affairs of Argentina and the attitude of that country towards outside aid and development of Argentina.

Before finishing the conference, he called the librarian of the Technical Library of the Argentine Industrial Union into the office. We were introduced to him and he in turn took us downstairs to the library and showed us around there. They have been able to amass a great many volumes that give assistance to their member industrialists. We started to ask him some questions about the activities of the Germans there. I mentioned specifically the development of the plant in San Carlos de Bariloche in order to corroborate the information that we had received earlier. He informed us that Mr. Peron had hired a German scientist to develop this plant on the theory that he could make atomic power from clear water. He corroborated Mr. Sidwell's information that this was released at the Bogota conference in order to instill fear in the other Latin American countries; to make the United States think about it and to give more weight to Argentina's voice at that very important conference.

He said Mr. Peron had perpetrated a big lie. Mr. Ted Armstrong and I laughed loudly and I said that Mr. Peron was really a big bluff about this particular point. He hurriedly put his finger to his lips and looked about with fear. This man had lived in fear during the Peron regime and even though Peron had been kicked out of Argentina, he still has a great deal of influence here and has many followers. This really gave me something to think about.

Fascist Influence in Argentina Today

Peron's influence is still quite evident from the action of some of the rightist political parties in the country. Whenever you go you see the Swastica marked on the sides of the downtown buildings. Prominent political parties are openly jeered by neo-fascists to the point that they will paint the Swastica of the Nazis on the various party posters. The political situation is very tense and far from stable in Argentina at the present time. There will be elections in the early part of 1958. It will be a contest between the very far right and the middle-of-the-road conservative party. If there can be a coalition of the rightists and other radical movements, the party that will gain power will possibly be of the Peronista leaning.

After finishing these interviews, we returned to the hotel for we had to leave that afternoon for Montevideo, Uruguay. Before leaving, however, we walked down the street from the hotel and passed the Casa Rosada, or the "White House" of Argentina. I took pictures of the scars that were left by the revolution that overthrew Peron. The Casa Rosada faces a broad plaza in Buenos Aires. To its right stands the Treasury Building. There was evidence of bombs that had been set off near the entrance. Some of the doors had been left unrepaired and others had apparently been repaired very hastily.

On the way to the airport, we passed by apartment houses that had been completed under the administration of Peron. We crossed broad plazas and well paved streets and bridges that gave testimony to the Peron regime. This regime made some materialistic progress in Argentina. It made this progress at the cost of liberty of the people. All along the way we could see unfinished projects, or projects that had been stopped by the provisional administration. As Mr. Ted Armstrong remarked to me, this was mute evidence indicating the lack of economic progress of the present provisional administration.
